The BMC officer in charge or his representative will accept that the materials are really the best of their kinds, when it is proved beyond doubt that no better materials of the particular kind in question are available in the market.
2. The contractor shall obtain the approval of the BMC officer in charge of samples of all materials to be used in the works and shall deposit these samples with him before placing an order for the materials with the suppliers. The materials brought on the works shall conform in every respect to their approved samples. Fresh samples shall be deposited with the BMC officer in charge whenever the type or source of any material changes.
3. The contractor shall check each fresh consignment of materials as it is brought to the site of works to see that they conform in all respects to the Specifications of the samples approved by BMC officer in charge, or both.
4. The Engineer will have the option to have any of the materials tested to find out whether they are in accordance with the Specifications and the Contractor will bear all expenses for such testing. All B bills, vouchers and test certificates, which in the opinion of the BMC officer in charge or his representative are necessary to convince him as to the quality of the materials or their suitability shall be produced for his inspection when required.
5. Any materials that have not been found to conform to the specifications will be rejected forthwith and shall be removed from the site by the contractor at his own cost within 24 hours.
6. BMC officer in charge shall have power to cause the Contractors to purchase and use such materials from any particular source, as may in his opinion be necessary for the proper execution of the work.
7. Notwithstanding the source, the sand shall be washed using sand washing machine before use.
8. To keep the premises clean and hygienic various equipment and supplies are used. No work can be done without proper equipment. It is important that the housekeeper & service provider make a careful selection of equipment based on suitability for use in a health care institution, appropriate design and required size, rugged construction and finish, ease and availability of maintenance, initial and operating costs, on-the-job tested performance, safety, and overall efficiency. Supplies should also be studied, and basic procedures developed to use these supplies most effectively in maintaining desired standards of cleanliness.
9. Housekeeping property is broadly classified as either equipment or supplies. Items classified as supplies are consumables, and equipment is reusable. Thus, floor machines, brooms, mops, stools, vacuum machines, etc. are categorized as equipment, whereas dusters, detergents, germicides, etc. are supplies.
10. Purchasing equipment: It is poor economy to buy less than high quality, timesaving equipment. It is also poor economy to buy good equipment and let it lay idle or to buy a product of better quality than is actually needed. If budget restrictions require it, expensive equipment can be programmed over the course of several years.
11. Selecting new equipment is the responsibility of the housekeeper. Advice may be obtained from the purchasing agent, maintenance superintendent, laundry manager, microbiologist, or other personnel, but the final decision rests with the housekeeper. In order to ensure that no wrong purchase is made, the housekeeper needs to do independent research in the market and on the job. A general checklist can be formulated to help the housekeeper and other personnel involved in the purchase of the equipment to remember every factor pertinent to the purchase of the equipment. The housekeeper also needs to evaluate a product before purchase. Very often the employees who use the product are the best people to consult for this.

12. Maintaining equipment: When an employee is provided with high quality equipment, he must be trained in its proper care in use and in storage. All equipment should also be inspected daily by the housekeeper or his representative for cleanliness, indications of wear and tear, neglect or abuse. Periodic detailed inspection should be made to forestall breakdowns.

13. Some institutions hold each worker responsible for the equipment assigned to him. Other equipment that is used by the department for general work, and which is shared by all the staff, is cared for and inspected regularly by the senior housekeeper, or a person assigned for the purpose. One method to ensure regular inspection is to set aside a specific room where equipment is turned in at the end of the day and made ready for use the next day. Another method is the systematic tagging of machines that have been inspected. This makes it easy for the housekeeper to make a quick check of machines that have not been inspected.

14. A card file with separate card for the service history of the equipment should be kept in the housekeeping department. This will provide the department with important data whenever replacement of equipment is being considered. In case of failure, a tag stating defective should be attached to the equipment, and the equipment should be sent to the maintenance department for a check. Space should be provided on the tag for a brief description of the defect, the department from which it was sent, the date on which it was sent, and the name of the person who discovered the defect.

15. The manufacturer's instructions concerning the operation, maintenance and adjustments of the equipment should be permanently kept in the housekeepers file. Copies should be given to the maintenance department for making repairs and to use the parts list for stockpiling small replacement parts. Each employee should be given individual instruction in handling the equipment he uses, and should have a set of instructions framed and hung in the immediate work area. Observing the employee as he uses the equipment will show how closely he adheres to the instructions.

16. If the maintenance department does not have workers with the skills required to repair particular equipment, it is advisable to use the services of the manufacturer's local representative for systematic maintenance and overhauling. By contracting his services, the institution need not stock up any spare parts, and also avoids loss of time, as he can provide substitute equipment while repairs are being made.
